MILLSTONE TOWNSHIP SHADE TREE COMMISSION

Hold on to Your Ash!

Since 2005, native ash trees have been under assault in the United States by an invasive insect, the Emerald Ash Borer (EAB). First detected in New Jersey in 2014, the insect is rapidly spreading throughout the state leaving a path of devastation in its wake. On May 23, 2017, the Millstone Township Shade Tree Commission (STC) hosted an EAB presentation by Richard Buckley, Director of the Plant Science Laboratory at Rutgers University. Look for rebroadcasting of this presentation on the PEG channel and more info to come in future newsletters and the STC Facebook page.

MONMOUTH COUNTY HEALTH DEPARTMENT

HERE COMES THE SUMMER: THINK S.U.R.F.

Tips for a fun and safe summer

As the weather gets warmer, the Monmouth County Health Department urges you to stay safe this summer and think "S.U.R.F." In June, the "S.U.R.F." campaign will kick off on social media to remind the public of summer safety measures.

MY DOG JUST BIT THE MAILMAN! WHAT DO I DO NOW?

Animal to human bites while unfortunate, are more common than you might think. So please understand that the Health Department is not here to "take away your pet" OR to write you summonses.

The Health Department becomes involved in animal bite incidents because of the potential for rabies transmission. Rabies is a disease that can affect all warm blooded mammals (including humans) and must be treated BEFORE the onset of symptoms in order for treatment to be effective. Our primary objective is to protect the health of the person who was bitten. Rabies shots for people who have been bitten are potentially expensive, intrusive and generally not necessary if the biting animal can be observed for 10 days.

Because of this, doctors, hospitals, police departments and animal control officers are required by law to report bites and exposures to the local Health Department. That means that if your dog, cat, horse or any other pet is involved in a bite, you will probably get a visit from the Health Inspector.

We will ask you when the last time your pet had a rabies vaccination/shot because rabies is a neurological disease (affecting the brain). They will ask you about the general health of your animal and if it has exhibited any symptoms of rabies. Symptoms can include loss of appetite, irritability, inability to swallow, excess salivation, unusual vocalization, abnormal behavior and restlessness, progressing to unprovoked aggression, trouble walking, tremors, seizures, or paralysis.

We will issue you a "Notice of Bite and Quarantine" This is a legal notice advising you that the animal must be observed at the end of 10 days. This is to insure that the animal has not developed symptoms of rabies or died within 10 days of the biting incident. The notice will instruct you to monitor your animals health. Do not let the animal run loose and keep it under the supervision of a responsible adult at all times. You may not euthanize or give the animal away during this time period without prior notification and approval from the Health Department. At the end of the 10 day period, the animal is observed again for illness, a release is signed and the "quarantine" is lifted. If you are the person bitten, wash the wound in soap and water and try to remember as much as you can about the biting animal (owner, description, location, etc.). Advise the doctor or local police department of the incident.

Finally, notification of local Police or Animal Control is extremely important when wildlife or stray animal bites are involved. This is the most effective way to insure that a bitten person is protected against rabies disease.

MONMOUTH COUNTY MOSQUITO CONTROL DIVISION

Tick Identification

To combat the threat of tick-borne diseases to residents, the Tick-borne Diseases Program of the Monmouth County Mosquito Control Division provides the service of Tick Identification as part of an on-going research program for the residents of Monmouth County. Tick Identification is free.

The best way to remove attached ticks is to grasp the tick with fine-tipped tweezers as close to the skin as possible; then pull straight up with a slow, steady force. Try to avoid crushing the tick or destroying it in any way. Clean the area of tick attachment with an antiseptic. Attached ticks should not be removed with noxious chemicals or by burning. This may cause injury to the skin and can increase the risk of transmission by causing the tick to regurgitate disease causing organisms into the body. Removed ticks can be saved in any sealed container to be later identified and tested. Do not place ticks in tape! This makes subsequent identification and testing difficult.

Ticks must be submitted in person at the Monmouth County Mosquito Control Division at 1901 Wayside Rd., Tinton Falls NJ 07724, between the hours of 8:15 a.m. and 4 p.m. only. You can submit them in any sealed container, such as a small Tupperware or Ziploc bag, and it does not matter if they are alive or dead. You will need to fill out a submission form with your contact information and details (to the best of your knowledge) about where the tick was found and how it was acquired. Ticks will not be processed without a signed submission form. Printed copies of the form are available when you bring in your tick.

The following information is given free of charge:

- Tick species: Different tick species can transmit different disease causing organisms, therefore knowing the species involved may alert you or your physician to watch for symptoms of specific disease(s).
- Tick development stage & gender: Different genders and stages of a tick (i.e., larva, nymph, adult) may be more or less likely to be infected with and/or transmit a disease-causing organism.
- Tick engorgement level: Engorgement level (how much blood it has taken in, i.e. whether flat, partially engorged, or fully engorged) is a relative indication of how long the tick was attached and feeding. The longer a tick is attached, the greater the risk that it may transmit a disease organism. For example, in the case of Lyme disease, at least 24 hours is usually required before the tick can effectively transmit the pathogen.

Only black-legged ticks ("deer ticks") can transmit the bacterium that causes Lyme disease. If your tick is identified as a black-legged tick, your risk of being exposed depends on several factors, including the life stage of the tick (nymphs and adult females are more likely to transmit), and how long the tick was attached (Lyme disease bacteria are more likely to be transmitted if the tick was feeding on you for 24+ hours, see above). However, regardless of tick ID results, if you develop any symptoms of Lyme disease you should see a physician. While Lyme disease is the most common vector-borne illness in Monmouth County, black-legged ticks can transmit other diseases, as can other species of ticks. See which ones in the table above.

Black-legged tick	Lone Star tick	American Dog tick
 <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Lyme disease• Anaplasmosis• Babesiosis	 <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Ehrlichiosis	 <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Rocky Mountain spotted fever

Results can provide information that may help you and your doctor in making diagnostic and treatment decisions. HOWEVER, THEY CANNOT TELL YOU WHETHER YOU HAVE A DISEASE. The identification and analysis of a submitted tick does not rule out the possibility that you may have had other undetected tick bites. Symptoms should never be ignored based on these results. If you think you may have contracted a tick-borne disease contact your physician. He or she will be the most qualified to discuss diagnosis and treatment of tick-borne disease. As of March 1, 2017, Monmouth County will no longer be testing individual submitted ticks for Lyme Disease infection. This program change is to make way for a new countywide active tick surveillance program that will provide spatial and temporal risk information to county residents. We believe the new program will better serve residents by helping to prevent tick-borne disease exposures.
